Discussion Board guidelines can be used for short essay questions. These are also under the Instructor Manual section.

1. Discuss three ways workplace bullying impacts the healthcare organization.

Intimidating and disruptive behaviors can foster medical errors, contribute to poor patient satisfaction and to preventable adverse outcomes, increase the cost of care, and cause qualified clinicians, administrators, and managers to seek new positions in more professional environments.

2. Identify three ways to protect employees from workplace violence.

Leadership needs to be fully committed to developing a violence prevention program to eliminate many of these risk factors. The program should be customized for the site, so a workplace analysis should be initiated first to evaluate the potential hazards before moving forward with a program. The program must include an employee safety and training program that will provide strategies that can be used during a crisis. There should be practice drills for crisis situations. Managers and supervisors need to be assigned roles in a violence prevention program and be held accountable. There also needs to be a debriefing after an incident occurs with mental health counselors available for all of the employees. Employees should be surveyed during program development to ensure that all of their needs are addressed.

3. Discuss three employment-related pieces of legislation that you believe are very important and why. Student responses will vary. Will obtain information from the Table 2.1

Family Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA): Requires employers with 50 or more employees within a 75-mile radius who work more than 25 hours per week and who have been employed more than 1 year to provide up to 12 work weeks of unpaid leave to an employee during any 12-month period, so the employee may provide care for a family member or obtain care for himself or herself. Enforced by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA): Increased restrictions on patient information confidentiality by creating a standard for patient information sharing. Enforced by U.S. Health and Human Services

Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970: This act requires employers to provide a safe and healthy work environment. Guidelines for working with hazardous chemicals and for working ergonomically. Enforced by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

4. What is an affirmative action plan? Perform an Internet search and discuss with your classmates the issues regarding this type of plan.

An affirmative action plan outlines the employer's standard on recruitment and hiring process to increase the diversity of the company's workforce. This plan is created to correct past discrimination in a company. These potential employees must be qualified for the job. Although an affirmative action plan encourages hiring protected-class candidates, an employer cannot set quotas for this process. They can develop strategies to encourage applications from diverse candidates.

An employer who develops an affirmative action plan must perform an analysis of the demographics of the current workforce compared to the eligible pool of qualified applicants. The employer must also calculate the percentage of those protected classes in the qualified applicants. The percentages are compared to determine if there was an underrepresentation of diverse employees in the organization. If it is determined that the current workforce is not diverse, then an employer develops a timetable that is aimed at hiring diverse employees and that also includes a recruitment plan.
