DETAILED CHAPTER OUTLINE

I. TERMINOLOGY

A. SEX

Biological distinction between females and males (chromosomes, gonads, hormones, internal sex organs, external genitals).

B. GENDER

Social and psychological characteristics associated with being a female (e.g., easily embarrassed) or a male (e.g., competitive).

C. GENDER IDENTITY

Psychological state of viewing oneself as a girl or a boy, and later as a woman or a man.

D. TRANSGENDER

Generic term for a person of one biological sex who displays characteristics of the other sex. For example, cross-dresser is a broad term for an individual who may dress or present himself or herself in the gender of the other sex.

E. GENDER ROLES

Socially dictated behavior for women and men (e.g., women typically do more housework/child care than men).

F. GENDER ROLE IDEOLOGY

Beliefs about the proper role relationships between women and men (e.g., traditionally man initiates first interaction with woman).

G. GENDER DIFFERENCES IN VIEWING ROMANTIC RELATIONSHIPS

1. MEN BELIEVE:

- a. Cohabitation improves marriage.
- b. Men control relationships.
- c. People will “cheat” if they feel they will not be caught.
- 2. WOMEN BELIEVE:
 - a. Love is more important than factors like age and race in choosing a mate.
 - b. Couples stop “trying” after they marry.
 - c. Women know when their men are lying.

II. THEORIES OF GENDER ROLE DEVELOPMENT

A. BIOSOCIAL/SOCIOBIOLOGY

Emphasizes that gender roles have a biological basis and an evolutionary survival function.

B. SOCIAL LEARNING

Gender role behavior is learned through being rewarded for some behaviors and punished for others.

C. IDENTIFICATION

Children acquire the characteristics and behaviors of their same-sex parent through a process of identifying with that parent.

D. COGNITIVE-DEVELOPMENTAL THEORY

Gender role acquisition depends on the mental maturity of the child.

Once children learn the concept of gender permanence (age 6 or 7), they seek to become competent members of their gender group.

III. AGENTS OF SOCIALIZATION

A. FAMILY

The family is a gendered institution and family roles are highly structured by gender.

B. RACE/ETHNICITY

Although African-American families are often stereotyped as being matriarchal, the more common pattern of authority in these families is egalitarian. Hispanics represent the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. population.

C. PEERS

Peer groups provide an enormous influence during adolescence. Their gender role socialization is primarily traditional.

1. BOYS ARE EXPECTED TO:

- a. Play sports.
- b. Be career-oriented.

2. GIRLS ARE EXPECTED TO BE:

- a. Physically attractive.
- b. Popular.
- c. Achievement-oriented.

D. RELIGION

- 1. Religion encourages individuals to adopt traditional gender roles.
- 2. Male dominance is indisputable in the hierarchy of religious organizations.
- 3. The stronger the religiosity of men the more traditional and sexist their view of women.

E. EDUCATION

Chapter 2

Schools reflect the broader U.S. culture and its patriarchal gender roles in their structure, organization, curriculum, and interaction.

F. ECONOMY

The economy is a very gendered institution in which men and women occupy stereotypically traditional gender roles.

G. MASS MEDIA

Media images of women and men typically conform to traditional gender stereotypes depicting the exploitation, victimization, and sexual objectification of women. Hip hop music reflects gender stereotypes with men being portrayed as sex-driven and tough, and women being portrayed as sex objects.

IV. GENDER ROLES IN OTHER SOCIETIES

A. GENDER ROLES IN LATINO/HISPANIC FAMILIES

1. TRADITIONAL FAMILY MODEL IN SPAIN CALLS FOR:

- a. Men as providers.
- b. Women as homemakers and mothers.

2. MOVING STEADILY TOWARD:

- a. Gender equality.
- b. Complementariness between genders.

B. AFGHANISTAN UNDER THE TALIBAN

1. Life of women under the Taliban was cruel, demeaning, and often fatal.
 - a. Women were not allowed to go to school or to earn an income.
 - b. Women could not leave the house unless accompanied by a male relative.
 - c. Some women drank bleach rather than live in this environment.

C. CARIBBEAN FAMILIES

Caribbean families in the Bahamas, Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad, Guyana, etc. are typically composed of a single woman and her children. Men may have children with many women but live with none of them on a full time basis.

D. EAST AND SOUTH AFRICA

Africa is a diverse continent with 50 separate nations. The cultures range from Islamic/Arabic cultures in Northern Africa to industrial and European-influenced cultures in South Africa. In some parts of East Africa (e.g., Kenya), gender roles are in flux. Maasai wives are expected to play a passive, obedient role.

V. CONSEQUENCES OF TRADITIONAL GENDER ROLE SOCIALIZATION

A. NEGATIVE CONSEQUENCES OF FEMALE ROLE SOCIALIZATION

1. Less education/income
2. High STI/HIV infection risk
3. Negative body image
4. Less personal/marital satisfaction

B. POSITIVE CONSEQUENCES OF FEMALE ROLE SOCIALIZATION

1. Longer life expectancy
2. Stronger relationship focus
3. Keeping relationships on track
4. Bonding with children

C. NEGATIVE CONSEQUENCES OF MALE ROLE SOCIALIZATION

1. Identity synonymous with occupation
2. Limited expression of emotions
3. Fear of intimacy
4. Custody disadvantages
5. Shorter life expectancy

D. BENEFITS OF TRADITIONAL MALE SOCIALIZATION

1. MEN TEND TO HAVE:
 - a. More freedom of movement.
 - b. More potential partners from whom to select.
 - c. Cultural freedom to initiate relationships.
2. MEN WHO WANT TO MARRY A TRADITIONAL WIFE:
 - a. Are religious.
 - b. Do not believe in divorce.
 - c. Believe that a wife making more money than her husband weakens the marriage.

VI. CHANGING GENDER ROLES

A. ANDROGYNY

1. Androgyny may be physiological (e.g., intersexed individuals) or behavioral, wherein the blending or reversal of traditional male and female behavior occurs.
2. Positive androgyny is devoid of the negative traits associated with masculinity and femininity.

B. GENDER ROLE TRANSCENDENCE:

Is the abandonment of gender schema so that personality traits and social and occupational roles become divorced from gender categories (e.g., men and women may be and display any behavior they want without fear of social stigma).

C. GENDER POSTMODERNISM:

Is the dissolution of male and female categories and creation of a “third sex” of “trans” people, which would involve new social structures based on the principles of equity, diversity, and the right to self-determination.

VII. PERSONAL CHOICES: CHOOSING GENDER BEHAVIOR THAT FITS

1. Occupational choices traditionally reserved for women or men need no longer be off the table for the other sex.
2. Dating roles whereby the woman initiates and the man is passive or marital roles whereby the woman is the primary breadwinner and the man is the child-focused homemaker become options.

VIII. THE FUTURE OF GENDER ROLES

1. Women and men will develop characteristics, lifestyles, and values that are independent of gender role stereotypes.
2. Characteristics such as strength, independence, logical thinking, and aggressiveness will no longer be associated with maleness, just as passivity, dependence, emotions, intuitiveness, and nurturance will no longer be associated with femaleness.
3. Relationships will become more egalitarian.

STUDENT PROJECTS AND CLASSROOM ACTIVITIES

1. Masculine and Feminine Characteristics

Part One: Ask students to submit to the instructor a list of five traits or characteristics associated with “femininity” and five traits or characteristics associated with “masculinity.” Then choose commonly cited characteristics from among students’ lists and compile one list that includes ten “male characteristics” (all odd-numbered items) and ten “female characteristics” (all even-numbered items).

Part Two: In class, tell students to take out a sheet of paper and number it 1 to 20. Tell students that you are going to read a list of various personality traits or characteristics. Students should indicate how well each of the characteristics describes them by writing a number from the following scale next to each item read by the instructor (write the scale on the board):

1	2	3	4
Usually Not True	Occasionally True	Usually True	Almost Always True

After all twenty items are read, instruct students to score themselves by adding all the even-numbered items for their “F Score” and adding all the odd-numbered items for their “M Score.” Then, according to the following chart, ask students to compute their final score:

F Score	M Score	Final Score
25 or above	25 or below	Feminine Typed
24 or below	25 or above	Masculine Typed
25 or above	25 or above	Androgynous
24 or below	24 or below	Undifferentiated

Explain the meaning of the final score categories:

1. Feminine Typed means the person scored high on feminine traits and low on masculine traits.
2. Masculine Typed means the person scored high on masculine traits and low on feminine traits.
3. Androgynous means the person scored high on both feminine and masculine traits.
4. Undifferentiated means the person scored low on both feminine and masculine traits.

Part Three: Ask how many women scored feminine typed. Masculine typed? Androgynous? Undifferentiated?

How many men scored feminine typed? Masculine typed? Androgynous? Undifferentiated?

Note the relative numbers of women and men scoring in each category. Typically there are several women who score as “masculine typed,” yet seldom do men score as “feminine typed.” If there are any men who score feminine typed, and if they admit it, note the reaction of the class. Students will often chuckle or make some other kind of ridiculing response to a man saying he scored “feminine typed.” Engage the class in a discussion around the following questions (Note: The instructor may modify these questions according to the patterns of responses given by students regarding their scores):

- 1) What are the implications of the fact that significantly more women scored “masculine typed” than men scored “feminine typed”?
- 2) If someone were to lie about his or her score, who do you think it would be and why? (Men may lie about scoring feminine typed due to the social disapproval for men’s being “feminine”.)
- 3) How did the class react when _____ revealed that he scored as “feminine typed”? (Or: How do you think members of the class would have reacted if a male student revealed that he scored “feminine typed”?)
- 4) How is there social disapproval for men to have “feminine” traits and characteristics? Is there similar disapproval for women who have “masculine” traits and characteristics? Why not? Are men more restricted by their gender role than women are?
- 5) Read the list of “feminine” traits and characteristics from the list compiled from students’ suggestions and write them on the board. Ask, “Why does U.S. society tend to discourage men from having these traits?”
- 6) How many heterosexual women would like their male partners to have more of those characteristics and traits that we associate with femininity?
- 7) If men in our society, and throughout the world, had more traits and characteristics traditionally defined as “feminine,” what would the effects be on the following?
 - a) crime and violence
 - b) domestic violence and abuse
 - c) divorce
 - d) teenage and unmarried childbearing
 - e) physical and mental health
 - f) homophobia, discrimination against gays, and anti-gay violence
 - g) gender inequality

2. Majors in College

Obtain data from your college or university regarding the proportion of men and women in each of the majors offered at your college or university. Present this data to students in class and examine the degree to which male students in your institution are majoring in areas that are traditionally dominated by men and the degree to which female students are majoring in areas that are traditionally dominated by women.

Chapter 2

If you can obtain data from earlier years, compare the data from different time periods. How has the proportion of men and women majoring in various subject areas changed across time?

Another version of this exercise involves asking students in your class to indicate on a piece of paper their major (or intended major) and their sex (female or male). On the board, list the various majors and the numbers (or percentages) of women and men in each major. Ask students to note and explain any associations between specific majors and gender.

3. Gender Roles in Other Societies

Invite a student or faculty member who has spent time in another culture to speak to the class about gender roles in another society. Gender roles of women in Iraq and Afghanistan have become particularly visible in the U.S. since 9/11. Invite women socialized in these countries to share their experience in those cultures.

4. How Has Your Gender Role Socialization Influenced Your Life?

Ask students to write a one- to two-page description of how their gender role socialization has influenced some aspect of their lives. For example, how has their gender role socialization influenced their occupational goals? Educational goals? Self-concept? Health? Relationships? You may select a sample of these to read to the class.

*Note: In completing this exercise, the authors have found that some female students insist that their lives have not been influenced by their gender role socialization. They claim that they have been taught to pursue their goals without being constrained by any traditional notions of what it means to be a woman in U.S. society. In response to this claim, the instructor may point out that what is interesting about it is that it is made by women--not by men. Why didn't any male student similarly claim that his gender role socialization has not constrained him? Perhaps the idea that women should not be constrained by traditional notions of femininity is itself part of the modern female gender role socialization experience.

5. Ann and Richard: An Activity Illustrating Gender Stereotypes

Distribute copies of Ann to half the students in the class and copies of Richard to the other half of the class. Tell students to fill in the blanks with a word or phrase.

Ann

Ann is a junior in college majoring in _____. She works part time as a _____ to help with college expenses. When she has a little extra money, she likes to spend it on _____. Ann had a boyfriend whom she met in her sophomore year; he was a(n) _____ major who liked to _____. But Ann broke up with him because he

Chapter 2

_____. Although Ann dates occasionally, she is not seriously involved with anyone; she is waiting to meet someone who is _____ and _____. In the meantime, Ann is focusing on herself. For example, she is trying to break a bad habit of _____ and is trying to improve her self-concept by _____ more and _____ less.

Richard

Richard is a junior in college majoring in _____. He works part time _____. He had a girlfriend whom he met in his sophomore year; she was a(n) _____ major who liked to _____. But he broke up with her because she _____. Although Richard dates occasionally, he is not seriously involved with anyone; he is waiting to meet someone who is _____ and _____. In the meantime, Richard is focusing on himself. For example, he is trying to break a bad habit of _____ and is trying to improve his self-concept by _____ more and _____ less.

After students have completed filling in the blanks, distribute copies of Richard to those students who completed Ann and copies of Ann to those students who completed Richard. Instruct students to fill in the blanks of the second story with the words or phrases they used in the first story. Follow up with a discussion surrounding the following questions:

1. What examples of gender stereotypes emerged in this activity?
2. Did women and men in the class stereotype Ann in similar ways? Why or why not?
3. Did women and men in the class stereotype Richard in similar ways? Why or why not?

6. Gender Roles in Children's Nursery Rhymes, Fairy Tales, and Songs

Instruct students to identify a children's nursery rhyme, fairy tale, or song that portrays females and/or males in traditional gender roles. Ask students to submit a copy of the nursery rhyme, fairy tale, or song along with a discussion of how it reinforces traditional gender roles.

7. A Parenting Scenario Involving Gender Issues

Instruct students to take out a piece of paper from their notebooks. Then read the following scenario to the class:

For Halloween, your four-year-old son Michael wants to dress up as "Kimberly," the pink female Power Ranger character. In previous years you have selected Michael's costume and this is the first year that you told Michael he could choose his costume for Halloween.

Ask students to write their responses to the following questions:

1. How would you, as Michael's parent, feel about his wanting to dress up as the female Power Ranger character "Kimberly"? What thoughts or concerns would you have about it?
2. How would you respond to Michael's request to dress up as "Kimberly" for Halloween? What would you do in this situation? What would you say to Michael?

Chapter 2

Allow five to ten minutes for students to write their responses to the questions above. Then ask students to indicate their gender by writing “Male” or “Female” at the top of the page. Collect the papers and read a sample of them to the class. Make notes on the board to indicate the following:

1. What percentage of female students would allow Michael to dress as Kimberly?
2. What percentage of male students would allow Michael to dress as Kimberly?
3. What percentage of female students would not allow Michael to dress as Kimberly?
4. What percentage of male students would not allow Michael to dress as Kimberly?
5. What various feelings, thoughts, and concerns do female students have about Michael’s wanting to dress as Kimberly?
6. What various feelings, thoughts, and concerns do male students have about Michael’s wanting to dress as Kimberly?

Facilitate class discussion around the following questions:

1. Are there gender differences in students’ reactions to the scenario? Why or why not?
2. Suppose the scenario involved a female child who wanted to dress as the male Power Ranger character “Zack.” Would your feelings, thoughts, and concerns be the same as or different from those in the first scenario? Why? Would your reaction be the same or different? Why?
3. Suppose two parents disagreed about whether or not to allow their male child to dress as “Kimberly” for Halloween. How could these parents resolve their conflict?
