True/false questions

31. It is possible for a company to issue different types of preference shares provided that the rights of each type are specified in its constitution.

The statement is true. This is a requirement of s 245A(2) of the Corporations Act.

Learning Objective 2.1 ~ account for the issue of shares fully subscribed, and payable in full or by instalments.

32. Prior to the allotment/issue of shares, the balance in the application account represents a liability of the company to the applicants.

The statement is true. If the shares are not issued, the money must be returned to the shareholders as soon as practicable.

Learning Objective 2.1 ~ account for the issue of shares fully subscribed, and payable in full or by instalments.

33. If a company has not reached a minimum subscription level within 90 days of the date of the disclosure document, the money paid in by applicants must be refunded by the company within 1 month in accordance with the requirements of ss 724(1) and (2) of the Corporations Act.

The statement is false. Section 724 (1) of the Corporation Act allows 4 months from the date of issuing the prospectus for the refund of money to the applicants.

Learning Objective 2.1 ~ account for the issue of shares fully subscribed, and payable in full or by instalments.

34. Any unpaid calls are accounted for as a receivable in a company's financial statements.

The statement is false. Unpaid calls/calls in arrears are accounted for as a reduction in share capital in a company's financial statements.

Learning Objective 2.1 ~ account for the issue of shares fully subscribed, and payable in full or by instalments.

35. In the case of a share issue being oversubscribed, any amount kept by the company for future calls is credited to a Calls in Advance account, which is reported as an addition to share capital in the financial statements.

The statement is true. Even though calls paid in advance are not legally part of share capital, they are not like normal unsecured liabilities, in that on liquidation, unsecured debts have priority over calls paid in advance, as per s 563A of the Corporations Act.

Learning Objective 2.2 ~ account for undersubscriptions and oversubscriptions of shares.

36. If a company forfeits shares and the company's constitution is silent in relation to reissue of the shares, the company is entitled to keep any balance in the account after reissue, payment of unpaid calls and interest and administrative costs.

The statement is true. Such amounts from forfeited shares are typically retained in a forfeited shares reserve account.

Learning Objective 2.3 ~ account for the forfeiture and reissue of shares.

37. Underwriting commission fees are treated as expenses as they are not considered to be an integral part of the equity issue transaction.

The statement is false. AASB 132 Financial Instruments: Presentation provides that such costs are to be accounted for as a reduction in the share capital being raised.

Learning Objective 2.4 ~ account for underwriting and other share issue costs and formation costs.

38. Share issue costs such as professional adviser's fees and brokerage fees must be reported as an expense in the income statement.

The statement is false. As these share issue costs are considered to be an integral part of the equity issue transaction, they are accounted for as a reduction in equity on the statement of financial position.

Learning Objective 2.4 ~ account for underwriting and other share issue costs and formation costs.

39. In accordance with AASB 138 Intangible Assets, company formation costs such as professional legal and accounting advice qualifies for recognition as an asset.

The statement is false. It is doubtful whether any future economic benefits will be obtained from such formation costs. As such, paragraph 69 of AASB 138 does not permit them to be treated as an asset so they must be expensed.

Learning Objective 2.4 ~ account for underwriting and other share issue costs and formation costs.

40. A rights issue gives all existing shareholders the right to an additional number of shares in proportion to their current shareholding.

The statement is true. Rights issues are entitlements for existing shareholders to purchase new shares. If all shareholders choose to exercise their rights, the percentage ownership interest of the shareholders will not change relative to each other.

Learning Objective 2.5 ~ account for the subsequent issues of shares, such as rights issues and private placements.

41. If a company makes a renounceable rights issue, the shareholders are not allowed to sell their rights, but must either accept or reject the offer to purchase additional shares in the company.

The statement is false. The scenario described is that of a non-renounceable issue. Under the terms of a renounceable rights issue, shareholders may sell their rights to acquire the company's shares to other investors.

Learning Objective 2.5 ~ account for the subsequent issues of shares, such as rights issues and private placements.

42. Section 124 of the Corporations Act places a restriction on the private placement of shares, limiting to 15% of existing capital the amount of capital that a company can issue in any one year without prior shareholder approval.

The statement is false. The 15% restriction on private placements of shares is set out in ASX Listing Rule 7.1, rather than in the Corporations Act. Therefore, the restriction applies only to listed entities.

Learning Objective 2.5 ~ account for the subsequent issues of shares, such as rights issues and private placements.

43. Share options issued at no cost to the recipient are accounted for in the same way as a rights issue.

The statement is true. On exercise of the options, the company records a debit to Cash and a credit to share capital.

Learning Objective 2.6 ~ account for the issue and exercise of share options.

44. Where share options are issued and subsequently lapse, the cost of the lapsed options is transferred to a Lapsed Options Reserve account.

The statement is true. This is because the cost of the lapsed options does not qualify as 'income' or 'revenue' under the Conceptual Framework/Framework because options represent the issue of an equity instrument.

Learning Objective 2.6 ~ account for the issue and exercise of share options.

45. Redeemable preference shares are always considered to be compound financial instruments that contain both equity and liability components.

The statement is false. Redeemable preference shares may be classified as liabilities, equity or compound financial instruments. The classification depends on the rights of the preference shareholders as set out in the company's constitution.

Learning Objective 2.7 ~ account for the redemption of redeemable preference shares.

46. Only fully paid-up preference shares can be redeemed by a company.

The statement is true. This is a requirement of s 254K of the Corporations Act.

Learning Objective 2.7 ~ account for the redemption of redeemable preference shares.

47. Share splits and share consolidations are only allowed if a company's constitution contains specific provisions relating to such transactions.

The statement is false. Section 254H of the Corporations Act permits such conversions to be undertaken provided a resolution is passed at a general meeting of the company's shareholders.

Learning Objective 2.8 ~ account for the conversion of shares into other shares.

48. If a company uses its surplus cash reserves to buy-back its own shares, the total equity of the company will increase by the equivalent amount of cash spent.

The statement is false. If a company buys-back its own shares, the company's share capital is effectively reduced.

Learning Objective 2.9 ~ account for the buy-back of shares.

49. Debentures may be issued at a nominal value, a premium or a discount.

The statement is true. The issue price of the debentures depends on the current market rates for investments of similar risks.

Learning Objective 2.10 ~ account for the issue and redemption of debentures and convertible notes.

50. Many investors may wish to purchase debentures or notes offering the ability to be converted into fully paid shares at the maturity date, in lieu of a cash payment.

The statement is true. These are known as convertible notes and their accounting treatment depends on the requirements of AASB 9.

Learning Objective 2.10 ~ account for the issue and redemption of debentures and convertible notes.
