49) Jake, the CEO of a company, appraises his managers based on how well they empower their employees. Which of the following managers is Jake likely to rate the highest in this regard?

- A) Hector, who gives clear instructions to his subordinates and expects them to follow the orders exactly as given
- B) Melody, who asks her subordinates to always check with her before making any decisions
- C) Jing, who prefers that members of his team always report to him what they do throughout the day
- D) Zara, who assigns responsibility to her subordinates and intervenes only when there is a need
- E) Darnell, who assigns complete authority to his subordinates and does not offer any guidance

Answer: D

Explanation: Empowering means giving employees responsibility and authority to make decisions regarding all aspects of product development or customer service. Employees are then held accountable for products and services; in return, they share the rewards and losses of the results.

50) According to emerging changes in the employment relationship, which of the following benefits do employees typically not expect to be provided by employers?

- A) Flexible work schedules
- B) Comfortable working conditions
- C) More autonomy
- D) Employability
- E) Job security

Answer: E

Explanation: New or emergent business strategies have resulted in changes in the employment relationship. Employees realize that companies cannot provide job security, so they want employability—that is, they want their company to provide training and job experiences to help ensure that employees can find other employment opportunities. In exchange for top performance and working longer hours without job security, employees want companies to provide flexible work schedules, comfortable working conditions, and more autonomy in accomplishing work.

- A) lower retention
- B) lower empowerment
- C) poorer customer service
- D) lower productivity
- E) lower turnover

Answer: E

Explanation: Employee engagement is the degree to which employees are fully involved in their work and the strength of their commitment to their job and the company. Employees who are engaged in their work and committed to the company they work for give companies competitive advantage, including higher productivity, better customer service, and lower turnover.

53) Which of the following is true of a balanced scorecard?

- A) It indicates the value of a company based on its competitive demands.
- B) It depicts a company from the perspective of internal and external customers.
- C) It measures a company's performance based on the business strategy adopted by it.
- D) It should not be used to link HRM activities and a company's business strategy.
- E) It guides companies to increase the time spent on new product and service development.

Answer: B

Explanation: A balanced scorecard gives managers an indication of the performance of a company based on the degree to which stakeholder needs are satisfied; it depicts the company from the perspective of internal and external customers, employees, and shareholders. The balanced scorecard differs from traditional measures of company performance by emphasizing that the critical indicators chosen are based on the company's business strategy and competitive demands.

- A) a balanced scorecard approach
- B) performance management
- C) total quality management
- D) social responsibility
- E) cultural responsibility

Answer: D

Explanation: Companies are recognizing that social responsibility can help boost a company's image with customers, gain access to new markets, and help attract and retain talented employees. Companies thus try to meet the shareholders' and general public's demands that they be more socially, ethically, and environmentally responsible.

- C) It strives to attain quality through supervision of daily work, not through training.
- D) It discourages employees from lean thinking.
- E) It aims to create a total business focus on serving the customer.

Answer: E

Explanation: The Six Sigma process consists of measuring, analyzing, improving, and then controlling processes once they have been brought within the narrow Six Sigma quality tolerances or standards. The objective of Six Sigma is to create a total business focus on serving the customer—that is, to deliver what customers really want when they want it.

- B) deliver the best customer service while compromising on volume and quantity.
- C) create quality products and services using maximum resources.
- D) do more with less effort, time, space, and equipment.
- E) discourage training and quality programs.

Answer: D

Explanation: Lean thinking is a way to do more with less effort, time, equipment, and space but still provide customers with what they need and want. Part of lean thinking includes training workers in new skills or how to apply old skills in new ways so they can quickly take over new responsibilities or use new skills to help fill customer orders.

- C) Pete, who is an employee at a direct competitor of Phoenix and is not looking for a new job
- D) Rogerio, who is unemployed and not looking for employment
- E) Karla, who works for Jupiter Inc. and is seeking employment elsewhere

Answer: E

Explanation: The labor force of current employees is often referred to as the internal labor force. Employers identify and select new employees from the external labor market through recruiting and selection. The external labor market includes persons actively seeking employment. Karla is the only person in this scenario who is not currently employed by Phoenix Inc. and is seeking a new job.

 - B) Increasing wage costs in the United States
 - C) Increasing public support for offshoring in the United States
 - D) Improving health and safety requirements overseas
 - E) Decreasing cost of living overseas

Answer: D

Explanation: Reshoring is becoming more common among U.S. companies. Reasons for this include concerns about the demoralizing effects of outsourcing on U.S. employees, the potentially negative effects of offshoring on the company's public image, the need for employees to be located close to business partners, and rising labor costs overseas, particularly in China as its middle class grows and demands higher wages.

- A) suppressed knowledge sharing.
 - B) creation of online expert communities.
 - C) loss of expert knowledge.
 - D) no sharing of best practices.
 - E) lower productivity.

Answer: E

Explanation: Issues that can be addressed by social networking include the loss of expert knowledge due to retirement, the promotion of innovation and creativity, the reinforcement of learning, and the need to identify and connect with promising job candidates. Despite its potential advantages, many companies are uncertain as to whether they should embrace social networking.  - D) They do not include partnership with competitors.
 - E) They combine top talent to solve tough challenges.

Answer: E

Explanation: Virtual teams are teams that are separated by time, geographic distance, culture, and/or organizational boundaries and that rely almost exclusively on technology (e-mail, Internet, videoconferencing) to interact and complete their projects. Options for talent are not limited by geography, so the best people can collaborate in virtual teams to address difficult problems.

87) Which of the following HRM practices involves rewarding employees based on their team's performance?

- A) Work design
- B) Performance management
- C) Training
- D) Staffing
- E) Compensation

Answer: E

Explanation: The ways in which compensation supports high-performance work systems are team-based performance pay. A part of compensation may be based on company or division financial performance.

88) Which of the following major dimensions of HRM practices involves training employees to have the skills needed to perform their jobs?

- A) Vision and mission of human resources
- B) Managing the human resource environment
- C) Acquiring and preparing human resources
- D) Compensating human resources
- E) Assessment and development of human resources

Answer: C

Explanation: Acquiring and preparing human resources deals with identifying human resource requirements, which includes recruiting employees and selecting employees. It also deals with training employees to have the skills needed to perform their jobs.

89) Which of the following dimensions of HRM practices involves ensuring that HRM practices comply with federal, state, and local laws?

- A) Vision and mission of human resources
- B) Managing the human resource environment
- C) Acquiring and preparing human resources
- D) Compensating human resources
- E) Assessment and development of human resources

Answer: B

Explanation: Managing internal and external environmental factors allows employees to make the greatest possible contribution to company productivity and competitiveness. Creating a positive environment for human resources in a company involves linking HRM practices to the company's business objectives (that is, strategic human resource management); ensuring that HRM practices comply with federal, state, and local laws; designing work that motivates and satisfies employees; and maximizes customer service, quality, and productivity.

90) Which of the following activities is part of the assessment and development of the human resources dimension of HRM practices?

- A) Training employees to have the skills needed to perform their jobs
- B) Identifying human resource requirements
- C) Ensuring that HRM practices comply with federal, state, and local laws
- D) Creating an employment relationship and a work environment that benefit the company
- E) Creating pay systems as well as providing employees with benefits

Answer: D

Explanation: Managers need to ensure that employees have the necessary skills to perform current and future jobs. As part of the assessment and development of human resources dimension of HRM practices, the HR department creates an employment relationship and a work environment that benefit both the company and the employee.

91) What are the two challenges that HR managers face? Discuss how the shared service model and the self-service model help them overcome the two challenges.

Answer: The amount of time that the HRM function devotes to administrative tasks is decreasing, and its roles as a strategic business partner, a change agent, and an employee advocate are increasing. HR managers face two important challenges: shifting their focus from current operations to strategies for the future and preparing non-HR managers to develop and implement human resource practices. To ensure that human resources contributes to a company's competitive advantage, many HR departments are organized based on a shared service model. The shared service model can help control costs and improve the business relevance and timeliness of HR practices. A shared service model is a way to organize the HR function that includes centers of expertise or excellence, service centers, and business partners. Centers of expertise or excellence include HR specialists in areas such as staffing or training who provide their services companywide. Service centers are a central place for administrative and transactional tasks such as enrolling in training programs or changing benefits that employees and managers can access online. The availability of the Internet has decreased the HRM role in maintaining records and providing self-service to employees. Self-service refers to giving employees online access to information about HR issues such as training, benefits, compensation, and contracts; online enrollment in programs and services; and completion of online attitude surveys.

92) Discuss the competencies, according to the Society for Human Resource Management, that HR professionals require to be successful.

Answer: Following are the nine competencies HR professionals need to have:

Human resource technical expertise and practice: It is the ability to apply the principles of human resource management to contribute to the success of a business.

Relationship management: It is the ability to manage interactions with and between others with the specific goal of providing service and organizational success.

Consultation: It is providing guidance to stakeholders such as employees and leaders seeking expert advice on a variety of circumstances and situations.

Organizational leadership and navigation: It is the ability to direct initiatives and processes within an organization and gain buy-in from stakeholders.

Communications: It is the ability to effectively exchange and create a free flow of information with and among various stakeholders at all levels of an organization to produce meaningful outcomes.

Global and cultural effectiveness: It is the ability to manage human resources both within and across boundaries.

Ethical practice: It includes integration of core values, integrity, and accountability throughout all organizational and business practices.

Critical evaluation: It involves the skills required to interpret information to determine return on investment and organizational impact in making recommendations and business decisions.

Business acumen: It is the ability to understand business functions and metrics within an organization and industry.

93) What is meant by empowering, and what type of training must be conducted to make it effective?

Answer: Empowering means giving employees responsibility and authority to make decisions regarding all aspects of product development or customer service. Employees are then held accountable for products and services; in return, they share the resulting rewards and losses of the results. For empowerment to be successful, managers must be trained to link employees to resources within and outside the company, help employees interact with their fellow employees and managers throughout the company, and ensure that employees are updated on important issues and cooperate with each other. Employees must also be trained to use the Web, e-mail, and other tools for communicating, collecting, and sharing information.

94) Discuss the balanced scorecard approach of measuring stakeholder performance.

Answer: The balanced scorecard gives managers an indication of the performance of a company based on the degree to which stakeholder needs are satisfied; it depicts the company from the perspective of internal and external customers, employees, and shareholders. The balanced scorecard is important because it brings together most of the features that a company needs to focus on to be competitive. The balanced scorecard should be used to (1) link human resource management activities to the company's business strategy and (2) evaluate the extent to which the HRM function is helping the company meet its strategic objectives. Communicating the scorecard to employees gives them a framework that helps them see the goals and strategies of the company, how these goals and strategies are measured, and how they influence the critical indicators.

95) What is the purpose of the Malcolm Baldrige Award? Describe the application and evaluation process, and list the seven characteristics that companies are scored for in the examination.

Answer: The Baldrige Award, created by public law, is the highest level of national recognition for quality that a U.S. company can receive. It was established to promote quality awareness, to recognize quality achievements of U.S. companies, and to publicize successful quality strategies. To become eligible for the Baldrige, a company must complete a detailed application with basic information about the firm, as well as an in-depth presentation of how it addresses specific criteria related to quality improvement. Applications are reviewed by an independent board of about 400 examiners, who come primarily from the private sector. One of the major benefits of applying for the Baldrige Award is the feedback report from the examining team noting the company's strengths and areas for improvement. The categories that are evaluated for scoring are leadership; measurement, analysis, and knowledge management; strategic planning; workforce focus; operations focus; results; and customer focus.

96) Discuss how managing cultural diversity can provide a competitive advantage to a firm.

Answer: Following are the ways in which managing cultural diversity can provide a competitive advantage:

1. Cost argument: As organizations become more diverse, the cost of a poor job in integrating workers will increase. Those who handle this well will thus create cost advantages over those who do not.
2. Employee attraction and retention argument: Companies will develop reputations as prospective employers for women and ethnic minorities. Those with the best reputations for managing diversity will win the competition for talent. This will be especially important as the labor pool shrinks and changes composition.
3. Marketing argument: The insight and cultural sensitivity that diverse employees bring to the marketing effort help a company enter new markets and develop products and services for diverse populations.
4. Creativity argument: Diversity of perspectives and less emphasis on conformity to norms of the past improve the level of creativity.
5. Problem-solving argument: Heterogeneity in decisions and problem-solving groups potentially produces better decisions through a wider range of perspectives and a more thorough critical analysis of issues.
6. System flexibility argument: Diversity brings greater flexibility when reacting to changes in customer preferences and tastes.

97) Discuss what companies should do to compete in the global marketplace.

Answer: Companies are finding that to survive they must compete in international markets as well as fend off foreign corporations' attempts to gain ground in the United States.

To meet these challenges, U.S. businesses must develop global markets, use their practices to improve global competitiveness, and better prepare employees for global assignments. Every business must be prepared to deal with the global economy. Global business expansion has been made easier by technology. The Internet allows data and information to be instantly accessible and sent around the world. The Internet, e-mail, social networking, and videoconferencing enable business deals to be completed between companies thousands of miles apart. Globalization is not limited to any particular sector of the economy, product market, or company size. Businesses around the world are attempting to increase their competitiveness and value by increasing their global presence, often through mergers and acquisitions.

98) What is a human resource information system (HRIS)? Explain the benefits of using an HRIS.

Answer: Companies continue to use human resource information systems to store large quantities of employee data, including personal information, training records, skills, compensation rates, absence records, and benefits usages and costs. A human resource information system (HRIS) is a computer system used to acquire, store, retrieve, and distribute information related to a company's human resources. An HRIS can support strategic decision-making, help a company avoid lawsuits, provide data for evaluating policies and programs, and support day-to-day HR decisions. Managers use the system to track employees' vacation and sick days and to make changes in staffing and pay. Using the HRIS, managers can request the HRIS system to automatically prepare a personnel report; they no longer have to contact the HR department to request one.

99) What is an HR dashboard? Explain a few ways in which it supports managers and employees.

Answer: One of the most important uses of Internet technology is the development of HR dashboards. An HR dashboard is a series of indicators or metrics that managers and employees have access to on their company's intranet or human resource information system. The HR dashboard provides access to important HR metrics for conducting workforce analytics. HR dashboards are important for determining the value of HR practices and how they contribute to business goals. As a result, the use of dashboards is critical for evidence-based HR management. For example, a company may view building talent as a priority, so it adds to its dashboard of people measures a metric to track how many people move and the reasons. This allows the firm to identify divisions that are developing new talent. Sophisticated systems such as the HR dashboard can extend management applications to decision-making in areas such as compensation and performance management. Managers can schedule job interviews or performance appraisals guided by the system to provide the necessary information and follow every step called for by the procedure.

100) Outline the four dimensions of human resource management practices.

Answer: 1. Managing the human resource environment: Managing internal and external environmental factors allows employees to make the greatest possible contribution to company productivity and competitiveness.

2. Acquiring and preparing human resources: It involves determining the number and type of employees needed, a value that is influenced by customer needs, terminations, promotions, and retirements. Managers also need to identify current or potential employees to fill those needs.

3. Assessment and development of human resources: Managers must ensure that employees have the necessary skills to perform current and future jobs. Work may be redesigned to be performed by teams. Companies need to create a supportive work environment.

4. Compensating human resources: Pay and benefits are important incentives to offer employees in exchange for contributing to productivity, quality, and customer service. They are also used to reward employees' membership and to attract new employees.
