73) State the steps in determining law based on the sociological school of law.

Answer: Followers of the sociological school propose three steps in determining law:

1. A legislator or a judge should make an inventory of community interests.
2. Judges and legislators should use this inventory to familiarize themselves with the community's standards and mores.
3. The judge or legislator should rule or legislate in conformity with those standards and mores.

74) List the various steps involved in the legislative process.

Answer:

Step 1: A bill is introduced into the U.S. House of Representatives or Senate by a single member or by several members. It is generally referred to the committee of the House or Senate that has jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bill.

Step 2: Let's briefly follow through the House of Representatives a bill proposing to deregulate the trucking industry by doing away with the rate-making power of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC). This bill would be referred to the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, which, in turn, would refer it to the appropriate subcommittee.

Step 3: The House subcommittee holds hearings on the bill, listening to testimony from all concerned parties and establishing a hearing record.

Step 4: After hearings, the bill is "marked up" (drafted in precise form) and then referred to the subcommittee for a vote.

Step 5: If the vote is affirmative, the subcommittee forwards the bill to the full House Energy and Commerce committee, which either accepts the subcommittee's recommendation, puts a hold on the bill, or rejects it. If the House committee votes to accept the bill, it reports the bill to the full House of Representatives for a vote by all members.

Step 6: If the bill is passed by the House of Representatives and a similar bill is passed by the Senate, the bills go to a Senate—House Conference Committee to reconcile any differences in content. After compromise and reconciliation of the two bills, a single bill is reported to the full House and Senate for a vote.

Step 7: If there is a final affirmative vote by both houses of Congress, the bill is forwarded to the president, who may sign it into law or veto it. When the president signs the bill into law, it becomes known as a statute, meaning it is written down and codified in the United States Code. In the event of a presidential veto, a two-thirds vote of the Senate and House membership is required to override the veto. If the president takes no action within 10 days of receiving the bill from Congress, the bill automatically becomes law without the president's signature.

75) Compare and contrast criminal law and civil law.

Answer: Criminal law comprises those federal and state statutes that prohibit wrongful conduct such as arson, rape, murder, extortion, forgery, and fraud. The purposes of criminal law are punitive (punishing offenders by imprisonment or fines), rehabilitative (rehabilitating offenders), and restitutive (making restitution to victims). The plaintiff in a criminal case is the United States, State X, County X, or City X, representing society and the victim against the defendant, who is most likely to be an individual but may also be a corporation, partnership, or single proprietorship. The plaintiff must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed a crime. Crimes are generally divided into felonies and misdemeanors. In most states, felonies are serious crimes (e.g., rape, arson, and criminal fraud) that are punishable by incarceration in a state penitentiary. Misdemeanors are less serious crimes (e.g., driving while intoxicated) that are usually punishable by shorter periods of imprisonment in a county or city jail or by fines. An act that is a misdemeanor in one state could be a felony in another state.

Civil law comprises federal and state statutes governing litigation between two private parties. Neither the state nor the federal government is represented in most civil cases. Rather than prosecutors, there are plaintiffs, who are usually individuals or businesses suing other individuals or businesses (the defendants) to obtain compensation for an alleged breach of a private duty.

76) Discuss how one determines whether a law is just or unjust.

Answer: A just law is a manmade code that squares with the moral law or the law of God. An unjust law is a code that is out of harmony with the moral law. To put it in the terms of the writings of Saint Thomas Aquinas, an unjust law is a human law that is not rooted in eternal and natural law. Any law that uplifts human personality is just. Any law that degrades human personality is unjust. All segregation statutes are unjust because segregation distorts the soul and damages the personality. An unjust law is a code that a majority inflicts on a minority but that is not binding on the majority itself. In contrast, a just law is a code that a majority compels a minority to follow that it is willing to follow itself. This is sameness made legal. An unjust law is a code inflicted upon a minority that that minority had no part in enacting or creating because they did not have the unhampered right to vote.

77) Discuss how the executive branch is a source of law in two ways.

Answer: The executive branch is a source of law in two ways:

Treaty Making: The president has the power, subject to the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties. These treaties become the law of the land, on the basis of the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution (Article VI), and supersede any state law. When President Carter entered into a treaty returning the Panama Canal Zone to the nation of Panama under certain conditions, it became the law of the land, and the treaty provisions superseded any federal or state laws inconsistent with the treaty.

Executive Orders: Throughout history, the president has made laws by issuing executive orders. For example, President Reagan, by virtue of an executive order, ruled that all executive federal agencies must do a cost-benefit analysis before setting forth a proposed regulation for comment by interested parties. The executive order as a source of law is also used by state governors to deal with emergencies and budget functions. Often, a governor will call out the National Guard or, in some states, implement particular aspects of the budget by executive order.
